

people left the floor and went to their offices while this discussion is underway. I won't be offended at all. The first amendment that I have, and the reason I didn't hand all these out is because the reading of it will make it clear what it is, and it is not that difficult to understand, and the amendments will be on Page 11 where these persons are allowed to recoup sales tax paid for these items once they have crossed a certain threshold with reference to investments, and so forth. This amendment would allow them to recoup anything they pay for dentures, wigs, and hairpieces of any kind, types, or description, and, before you all become too alarmed at how long I am going to do this, I have a few of these kind that I am going to offer, but 20 additional amendments that I had offered are going to be withdrawn because I have been able to condense those 20 into one, and it is not very long either. But you are going to have to suffer through these others. I am going to tell you why I feel this amendment is valid. If we are going to say that it is essential to keep business in Nebraska, I cannot quarrel with that. If we are going to say it is desirable to draw new businesses to Nebraska, I won't quarrel with that, but if I am told as 775 in its present form tells me that it is necessary to give capital gains exemptions, methods of double dipping on aircraft and mainframe computers, when I am told that it is necessary to do those things to retain businesses in Nebraska, and to draw new businesses, I think the pot needs to be sweetened more. And if one of these executives has to wear dentures, I don't think he should have to pay sales tax on those dentures. If because of his appearance being unsatisfactory to himself without a full complement of hair he wants to buy a hairpiece or wig, he shouldn't have to pay sales tax on that. So since wigs, hairpieces, and dentures are very essential to a person's self-image, and we cannot have an effective executive if he does not have a positive self-image, I want to make it as easy as possible for that positive self-image to be obtained. I listen to a doctor named Sol Kutler advertising his denture clinic many times when I am driving down to Lincoln, and with the advancements that they have made in dental technology, dentures is a term that may not be broad enough to cover all types of corrective actions that can be taken for a person who has lost his teeth, but dentures is something that everybody understands. And Dr. Sol Kutler has indicated that if a person loses teeth and does not replace them somehow, then the underlying bone and tissue will tend to become shrunken and recede and the mouth will become sunken, the face will look smaller, and it is difficult for a person with an appearance such as that to deal forcefully and aggressively with employees
